FAQ

Q1: Do I really need an estate plan if I don't have a lot of assets?

A1: Yes, even if your assets are modest, an estate plan is essential. It ensures your wishes are followed regarding the distribution of your assets and the guardianship of your children (if applicable). It also allows you to designate healthcare proxies and plan for potential incapacitation.

Q2: How often should I review my estate plan?

A2: It's advisable to review your estate plan at least every three to five years, or whenever there are significant life changes such as marriage, divorce, birth of a child, death of a beneficiary, or substantial changes in your financial situation.

Q3: What is the difference between a will and a trust?

A3: A will is a legal document that outlines how your assets will be distributed after your death. A trust is a legal entity that holds and manages assets for the benefit of beneficiaries. Trusts often offer greater flexibility and asset protection than wills.

Q4: What is probate, and how can I avoid it?

A4: Probate is the legal process of validating a will and distributing assets after someone dies. It can be lengthy and costly. Strategies to avoid probate include joint ownership, payable-on-death designations, and living trusts.

Q5: What is a power of attorney?

A5: A power of attorney is a legal document that authorizes someone to act on your behalf in financial or legal matters. A durable power of attorney remains in effect even if you become incapacitated.

Q6: How can I find a qualified estate planning attorney?

A6: You can find a qualified estate planning attorney through referrals from friends, family, or financial advisors. You can also search online directories of attorneys specializing in estate planning. Look for an attorney with experience and a good reputation.

Q7: Is it possible to create an estate plan without an attorney?

A7: While some individuals create basic wills using online templates, it's generally recommended to seek legal
