World War I, also known as the Great War, was a global conflict that engulfed Europe and beyond from 1914 to 1918. A simple World War 1 study guide answer often focuses on the assassination of Archduke Franz Ferdinand, but the truth is far more nuanced. The assassination served as the spark, igniting a powder keg of long-simmering tensions. Understanding the war requires exploring its multiple causes, including:

- Militarism: A massive arms race fueled by nationalistic fervor and a belief in military might as the ultimate guarantor of national security.
- Alliances: A complex web of treaties obligated nations to defend each other, drawing more and more countries into the conflict. The tangled alliances, often described as a 'powder keg', quickly escalated a local conflict into a global war.
- Imperialism: Competition for colonies and resources created friction between European powers, exacerbating existing rivalries.
- Nationalism: Extreme patriotism and a desire for self-determination fueled tensions between ethnic groups and nations.

The consequences of the war were equally profound, including the collapse of empires (Austro-Hungarian, Ottoman, Russian, German), the rise of new nations, and the devastating loss of human life (estimated at 15-22 million).
